FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Fashions in Furniture.

One man is largely responsible for the requirements of home decoration today. Years ago William Morris began it when he threw his hands from our window's white cotton ties with which they were wont to decorate their loaves and opened the eyes of a few to the fact that elaborate and decorative and cheap wood brilliantly varnished were not art. Then began the introduction of a few good pieces, survivals of an artistic decoration ended so suddenly after Sheraton's day a century before or copies made by the occasional farsighted manufacturer. At that time these pieces were rare and used with out any regard to their surroundings, although through them we learned a little about the furnishings of the different periods and could talk under standingly of colonial and Heppel white and Sheraton and French and mission furniture and pointed with pride to our various possessions, never realizing that the hopeless medley of our furnishings was only a shade less inartistic than the early varnished pieces that preceded them.

Now all is changing. In the first place, the shops no longer offer any except pieces definitely copied from some famous worker's designs or else adapted and modernized, retaining all the decided characteristics. No longer must you buy a chair or a table because you like it. You must buy it for a certain place in your house, because it is now out of the question to have a Chippendale chair, a mission table, colonial wall paper and a Heppelwhite bed all in the same room. Your furniture and wall paper and draperies and carpet must all be selected with definite knowledge of what is what, and fortunate indeed for most of us it is that the salesman knows and can take us over the difficult.

A Waitress on Wheels.

The removal of plates and dishes already used and the labor of replacing them with another course means an awkward break in the meal in households where there is no one to wait upon the table. It is an extra burden upon a housekeeper, who is glad enough to sit down after her labor in the kitchen. The appliance shown reproduced from the American Kitchen.

The Waitress on Wheels.

The removal of plates and dishes already used and the labor of replacing them with another course means an awkward break in the meal in households where there is no one to wait upon the table. It is an extra burden upon a housekeeper, who is glad enough to sit down after her labor in the kitchen. The appliance shown reproduced from the American Kitchen.

THE WAITRESS COMPLETE.

en Magazine, is a very convenient labor saver, combining the convenience of the serving table with the utility of the dining wagon in small folding table on casters used largely in restaurants as a temporary receptacle for supplies.

The "waitress" in question is made from a firm box 20 inches long, 17 inches wide and 12 inches deep. Four pieces of smooth 2 by 2 lumber, each fourteen inches long, are required to form the legs. The top of the box, supported by slats, forms one shelf. The board that is to be the base of the serving table must then be taken off and the four corners sewed out to admit the legs. After the holes are sawed out the board must be replaced, the legs set up in the box two or three inches, or high enough to allow the shelf to rest upon them, and the whole fastened together firmly. It is a good plan to nail a board about two inches wide across the front to hold in the numerous dishes which will be placed there later. A railing or boarding is put on three sides of the top, and four casters complete the structure. At meal times the "waitress" stands by the hostess, with dessert or any other additional dish on its shelves. Plates and dishes removed during the meal are placed in it and the extra course put on the table. After the meal all the dishes are placed on the serving table, which is then rolled into the kitchen, saving many unnecessary steps.

The Baby at Home.

It is always a good sign for a baby to sleep a great deal, and delicate and puny infants who sleep much become strong and healthy children. Even babies who are large and thriving at birth, unless they get a great deal of sleep, become weak and sickly.

A baby should have few toys and these of the simplest kind. The infant with a lot of amusements—always being tossed in the air, danced on the knee, having a rattle shaken in its ear or surrounded constantly with all sorts of playthings—lives in a state of unhealthy excitement. It grows bored. It wants something new all the time and frets and cries if it doesn't get it. The average healthy baby can and does amuse himself. It plays with its toes, stretches its legs, bites its fists experimentally, watches its mother as she walks around the room, and all this is fun, besides being just what baby needs.

Dr. Woolley's PAINLESS OPIUM AND Whiskey Cure

Outable. "Hi there!" shouted the customs officer suspiciously. "Why are you holding your handkerchief to your face?" "There's a bit of cinder in my eye," answered the returning tourist.

"Ah, foreign substance in the eye! You'll have to pay duty on it."—Philadelphia Record.

The Wise Bride.

"As long, George, as we haven't any coal to cook with there is one thing I must speak to the fish dealer about." "And what is that, my dear?" "I must ask him to be sure to lay in a large supply of raw oysters."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Lovely Woman.

Miss Hoomley—I don't know whether or not to wear a veil with this hat. Do you think it would improve it? Miss Speitz—That depends, dear. Do you mean to wear the veil over your face or up on your hat?—Philadelphia Press.

Still Worse.

Ethel—What is more aggravating than a man who tells you of his love and never mentions matrimony? Edith—Oh, a man who tells you of his money and never mentions matrimony.—Judge.

In the Studio.

Baker's Wife—I should like to have my little boy put into the picture too. Artist—Then it will cost $20 more. Baker's Wife—But I'll take him in my lap.—Lippincott's.

The Limit.

Mrs. Upton—Why, I thought your little dog was white! Mrs. De Style—So he was; but I had him dyed brown to match this dress.—Chicago Daily News.

The Last Resort.

"Here's something about an author committing suicide." "Yes; he had to advertise his books in some way."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Momentous Snore.

Persons because an elephant sneezes or sneezes because he sneezes so loud—elephant folk are very superstitious about the occurrence and believe that to hear an elephant sneeze brings good luck. The Baltimore Herald gives an account of the effect produced by the sneeze of Jumbo II. at the Maryland industrial exhibition.

Jumbo's sneeze is like the bursting of a boiler, and it created a fairly good sized panic. The elephant began to get ready for the sneeze half an hour before it happened, and as the time for the event drew near he was rolling about in his cage, apparently in great agony. Suddenly he stopped, gave one belch and then sneezed.

The look of perfect contentment on his face after the great event was in startling contrast to the terror seen on the faces of the fleeing people. Visitors to the exposition were running in all directions, not knowing what awful thing it was from which they were fleeing.

Among the Mohammedans of the oriental and Cingalese villages Jumbo's sneeze caused wild excitement. They rushed to the cage and, bowing before his elephantine highness, began praying at a rapid rate. When they finished, they explained that an elephant's sneezes are of the rarest occurrence, and the event was one of great significance to them. Elephants are susceptible to cold and catch cold easily, but it is very, very rarely that they sneeze.

The old grist mill at Port Jefferson, N. Y., which was built before the Revolution by Richard Mott and is said to be the oldest structure on the island, is being torn down because it is unsafe. The building was erected in 1771.

Sidney Smith described the Ostrichynchus paradoxus as a quadruped as large as a cat, with the eyes, color and skin of a mole and the bill and feet of a duck, an eccentric kind of bird bitten with the ambition of being a quadruped.
